Self consistency a theory of personality pdf free download

Prescott Lecky (born 1 November 1892 – 30 May 1941) was a professor of Psychology at Columbia University from 1924 to 1934. At a time when American psychology was dominated by behaviorism, he developed the concept of self-help as a method in self-psychotherapy in the 1920s. His concepts influenced Maxwell Maltz in his writing of the classic self-help book, Psycho-Cybernetics. George Kelly, in his book The Psychology of Personal Constructs, also credits Lecky as an influence. Lecky stressed the resistance defense mechanism as an individual's method of adjusting his self-conception. [2] Lecky's theory of self-consciousness is that self-consciousness is a primary motivating force in human behavior. Lecky's theory was about the organization of ideas of self and the general need for a "master" motive that serves to maintain a consistency in ideas. [3] Self-consistency theory remains relevant to contemporary personality and clinical psychologists. [4] He was known as a psychologist and advised John F. Kennedy when he was having trouble at Choate's school of preparation. [5] His students collected his ideas and posthumously published them as Self-esteem: a personality theory in 1945. [6] Lecky was born in Virginia and died in New York. He's buried at the Hollywood cemetery in Richmond, Virginia. Prescott Lecky findagrave.com Ansbacher, Heinz L. (1981).
